FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

We offer state-of-the-art training and clinical practice experience for advanced practice psychiatric provider residents in a cutting-edge behavioral health facility with expert clinicians on-site.

Why should I consider a fellowship?

As a recently graduated psychiatric mental health nurse practitioner, you can ease the transition into practice and gain valuable experience in real-world settings over the 12-month program.

What does a typical week look like?

Each week will include a day of didactics and lectures on a variety of topics in psychiatry, reviews of best practices, case studies, grand rounds, and training in psychotherapy. There will also be dedicated time every week for quality improvement planning and project implementation.

What is the compensation?

$7,320 monthly, plus UW benefits. Total benefits compensation package $116,215.

Will I receive hands-on clinical practice?

Advancing high-quality mental health care is a core tenant of the program. The fellowship will provide the opportunity for practitioners to increase their responsibilities in patient care and panel management progressively, with the support of preceptorships and mentorships.

Will there be clinical rotations?

Yes. Site rotations will be within the UW Medical Center system in the greater Seattle area. The primary site will be within the integrated primary care clinics, with planned rotations in consult liaison, psychiatric emergency department, and possible additional rotations in other areas, like perinatal psychiatry.

What is the fellow to preceptor ratio?

The preceptor to fellow ratio is one or two fellows per preceptor.
